Course Rationale

- Social investment in children now, will improve their life chances and future productivity as members of the labour force.
- A skilled and productive future labour force will help to ensure sustainable development.

Course Description

This course seeks to examine the critical social issues and social policy challenges in relation to children. The dimensions and causes of child vulnerability will be discussed within several theoretical frameworks. Current policies and programmes in developing countries to reduce vulnerability of children will be assessed. Cross-cutting issues in the course will be discussed using gender and stratification analyses.
